

Since you are already successfully building your supply side (gathering resumes from local Detroit pros via Indeed), you have solved the first half of the marketplace equation. To hit your scaling goals of $10M and eventually $100M, your primary focus now must shift to aggressive demand generation—specifically, acquiring high-volume contracts and building local consumer liquidity.

Based on the multi-service marketplace models (like Handled), here is a detailed strategy for finding the work and securing contracts in the Detroit area for your cleaning, landscaping, and handyman services.

1. Target B2B Commercial Contracts First (The Volume Play)

Acquiring individual residential customers is slow and expensive. To scale quickly, your initial sales effort should target local Detroit businesses that need constant, recurring service.

- Property Management Companies: Pitch your services for rapid tenant turnover cleanouts, unit prep, and recurring home maintenance. Landlords constantly need painters, handymen, and cleaners between leases.
- Real Estate Agents & Stagers: Offer move-in and move-out deep cleaning, as well as property prep for open houses.
- Retail & Storage Facilities: Market your services for on-call facility clearing, maintenance, or some-day local transport and heavy lifting if your handymen also do haul-aways.
- How to win these contracts: Differentiate your platform from traditional contractors by offering B2B partners dedicated account dispatch, priority routing, and Net-30 invoicing.

2. Win the Residential (B2C) Market with Trust and Speed

For everyday Detroit homeowners, you need to eliminate the friction of hiring a contractor. Your mobile app and portals must offer a seamless, modern experience.

- The "60-Second" Booking Moat: Allow customers to book assistance instantly online with 60-second booking.
- Upfront Pricing: Do not make customers wait for quotes. Provide upfront flat rates with no surprise fuel or stair surcharges, giving them their real price in about a minute with no callbacks or surprise invoices.
- Leverage Your Indeed Vetting: Trust is your biggest hurdle. Heavily market that every pro you deploy is fully vetted, ID and background-checked, licensed where required, and rated on every job.
- The Ironclad Guarantee: Protect every booking with a strict "make-it-right guarantee". Promise a free redo or your money back within 30 days if the job isn't right. This completely removes the risk for a new customer trying your app for the first time.

3. Build "Uber-Like" Features into Your App

Since you are communicating with customers via portals and a mobile app, the technology needs to match the standards set by giants like Uber or Amazon.

- Real-Time Tracking: Integrate GPS live tracking so customers receive real-time arrival updates.
- One Account for Everything: Since you are offering multiple services (cleaning, landscaping, handyman/craftsman), build the app so customers can access all of these services through one single account. Once they trust you to mow their lawn, they are highly likely to use the same app to hire a handyman or book a deep clean.

Next Immediate Step for Detroit: Send targeted cold emails and LinkedIn messages to property managers and top real estate brokerages in Detroit. Offer them a discounted "pilot" cleanout or handyman repair so they can experience your digital booking, tracking, and invoicing first-hand. Once you lock in 3 to 5 commercial anchor tenants, you will have the steady cash flow needed to fund your consumer app marketing.
